FEBRUARY SALE

Bought your pillows & comforters elsewhere? Guaranteed you overpaid!!!

CAVEAT EMPTOR (BUYER BEWARE)

Don't be misled by advertisements for European goose down comforters at supposedly "SALE PRICES". We'll show you that most of those ads do not represent good values at all. Just because these advertisements are from major departments stores - do not be fooled-all down is not alike.

The quality of goose down is measured in fill power (also known as loft). Fill Power is the amount of cubic inches one ounce of down will fill. Our 800 plus Siberian Goose Down will fill between 800 and 850 cubic inches of space. "The Company Store" catalog always lists the fill power of their goose down. Bring in their catalog and we'll generally save you 50% off their prices.

Goose Down Comforters are an investment, with proper care a fine quality comforter will last a life time. Our high quality 100% cotton shells, or tickings, are divided into baffle boxes. The baffle box has a mesh channel separating the top from the bottom of the comforter. The baffle allows the down to give you maximum loft without collecting in one section of the comforter. We do not cater to the consumer that is more interested in price than quality. Our most valuable asset is our customer. We will only sell a product that we believe to be the highest value at the best price. Cheap low quality down should fill garage cans not pillows and comforters. All our goose down pillows and comforters contain 100% goose down even though it is legal to combine 70% down and 30% feathers and label the item 100% goose down. Remember feathers are those things with quills, down is similar to tiny balls of cotton, absolutely no hard quill. Our goose down comforters and pillows are machine washable because they only contain down.

The larger the individual down cluster the higher the fill power. The higher the fill power the better the comforter will insulate thus providing more comfort to you. Since you are spending 1/3 of your life in bed it should be as luxurious as possible. - Why not?

A Peek Into The Future At Billion Dollar Homes For Sale In The Hamptons

By Dan Rattiner

The year is 2040. Sitting in a real estate office in East Hampton are Agnes and Tom Skanek. A real estate woman is showing them holograms of houses for sale.

"Now here's an oceanfront house once owned by Madonna."

"I thought Madonna retired to Miami Beach."

"This was the house she sold five years ago. It's for sale now for $3.1 billion."

"Oh I think that's way out of our ballpark," Agnes says.

"It's on Lily Pond Lane."

"We just can't afford it," Tom says.

The real estate woman presses a button. Madonna's house is gone and is replaced by a smaller one. It floats on the table between the three of them, its three dimensions slowly turning so they can see it from every angle.

"Now this is a house inland, just a short walk from the beach. It's in Amagansett. Pool. An acre of grounds. They're asking $1.1 billion. But I think they might come down to $900 million. It was once owned by a sister of Bruce Springsteen."

"It's still a bit more than we want to spend," Agnes says.

"Well, why don't you give me some budget figures," the real estate lady says.

have a folder, let me see, here it is, for a house that's just come on the market — its something of a fixer upper — that once belonged to a nephew of the brother of Michael J. Fox. Here's a photo of it. Three bedrooms, one bath, a little deck out front. That's a very nice tree they have there in the yard. They're asking $500 million."

"Gee, Agnes, what do you think?" Tom says.

"Well, it's a little over our budget."

"Maybe my dad could pitch in a little."

"You think so?" Agnes asks.

"Maybe. Where would he be right now? I guess at the office."

Tom gets up. "Do you have a payphone?" he asks.

"Thanks very much."

Tom goes out, picks up the receiver and dials the number. An operator comes on.

"Please deposit $30 million for the first three minutes," she says.

"They are asking $1.1 billion, but I think they might come down to $900 billion. It was once owned by sister of Bruce Springsteen."

"We were hoping to find something in the $400 million range," Tom says.

"Oh we have very little at that price," the real estate lady says. "I mean, this is the Hamptons."

"Don't you have ANYTHING?" Agnes asks.

"Well let me see," the lady says. "Oh yes. It's not on the hologram system of course. But I do

Our own Kat's Eye columnist Katlean de Monchy was on ABC's hot daytime show The View last week. We all watched the stars at the Golden Globes and noticed their fashions. Katlean took those $10,000 and up celebrity designer fashions and created look alikes where models wore similar outfits that could be purchased for under $30. All of this was done within a day after the Golden Globes. The Cadowoman.com website was overheated with approximately 100,000 hits in two hours. We hear Katlean will be back at Oscar time.

Westhampton Beach's Rabbi Marc Schneier, President of the Foundation for Ethnic Understanding, and East Hampton's Russell Simmons, CEO of Rush Communications and Def Jam Entertainment, are featured in a public service announcement airing in January in commemoration of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. Day and in February in celebration of Black History Month. The PSA, produced by Time Warner Cable, calls upon New Yorkers to recognize the strength that comes from sharing similarities and differences. The public service announcement airs on CMM, New York 1, MTV, CNBC, Nickelodeon, Fox News, MSNBC, Comedy Central, A&E and VH1.

Tall

Tall

Eisenhower, Reagan, Clinton, Jesse Jackson, Donald Trump But Not Albert Einstein

By Dan Rattiner

At the beginning of January, The New York Times Magazine was entirely devoted to the life stories of some of the more remarkable people who passed away in 2000. There was Screamin' Jay Hawkins, the rock and roll singer, there was Tito Puente, the Mambo King. There were at least two people who had homes for many years here in the Hamptons, former Mayor John V. Lindsay and Broadway Show star Gwen Verdon.

Among those profiled was Fred Kelly, brother of dancer Gene Kelly, one of the great dance teachers of the last generation. One dark night in England in 1944, just before the great Allied invasion of Normandy, some soldiers in a jeep went to his barracks — he'd been part of a USO troop entertaining the soldiers earlier in the evening — to tell him that Allied Commander Dwight D. Eisenhower wanted to see him.

"He saw the show," the soldiers told him. "He wondered if you could teach him how to tap dance."

"I could certainly try," Kelly said.

The meeting, in Ike's cabin that night, is well documented, and it is re-told by Times writer hour, at which time sirens went off, German planes came overhead dropping bombs and Ike escorted Kelly to the door.

"Keep your head down, Sergeant Kelly," Ike said.

Kelly never saw him again. But he never forgot what he often said was the most memorable tap dance lesson he ever gave.

It was a good article, and what struck me about it was a description of Ike, a big man, well over six feet, with a barrel chest. John Lindsay, whose story was also in this magazine, was someone I had met who was also well over six feet.

I read this account of Ike's tap dance lesson only an hour after returning from a reception given for the Reverend Jesse Jackson, the civil rights leader, who was in East Hampton to speak at the Ross School about Martin Luther King Jr. It was the birthday of Dr. King and a

Michael Chabon. There was a gramophone. And an old shellac record made by a Scottish contralto of some Presbyterian hymns. In the livingroom of that cabin, Kelly taught Ike how to do a reasonable facsimile of the Peabody, the Buck and Wing, the Shuffle and the Flap. The lesson lasted about an state holiday.

At the reception, at the suggestion of my son Adam, I shook Rev. Jackson's hand and asked him about Leonard Peltier, a native American, who many believe is wrongly jailed, sitting on death row. I approached the reverend, and was astonished to note that he was at least six foot three. I had to look up to talk to him.

"We're trying very hard to get him out," the Reverend said.

Then he looked past me to a TV monitor in the reception room. And he said, "Oh My God." And it was like I wasn't there anymore.

On the screen was a film clip made of the Reverend about thirty five years earlier. The Ross School had collected and assembled these clips in anticipation of his upcoming speech. There were monitors everywhere showing these clips.

"Where did they find THAT," the Reverend said to nobody in particular.

He looked exactly as I remembered him back then. Bell bottoms. A silk shirt. And a big Afro hairdo that probably built him up to six foot seven.

The fact is that over all these years running Dan's Papers, I have interviewed probably a thousand people, many of whom are leaders of our time. On average — there are many exceptions to this of course — the men who are leaders tend to be tall, perhaps two to three inches taller than the rest of us. That is just the way it is.

Last summer, for example, I interviewed two men running for President, Al Gore who is six foot three, and Bill Bradley who is six foot seven. Donald Trump, whom I first met when he was running the Plaza, is six foot three. And Bill Clinton, who I met one year when we shared duties umpiring the Artist-Writers Softball Game in East Hampton, is six two. (I don't think there has been an American President in twenty years less than six feet.)

In New York City, a month ago, I went to the newly opened Madame Tussaud's Wax Museum in Times Square. Here are almost perfect reproductions of some of the most famous people who ever lived, assembled in rooms as if they were at a cocktail party. You can walk among them. Put your hand on their shoulders. Abraham Lincoln. Charles Lindbergh. Woodrow Wilson. All tall. There were exceptions of course. Albert Einstein was five foot seven and a half. But when I asked our guide about it, about whether they weren't made larger than life, he said no, this is how tall they were. These were exact reproduction measurements.

I have a theory about all of this. Celebrities, at least the men celebrities who have been elevated to that status by their peers, are elevated to their status not only because of their accomplishments, but because they've had a lot of peers who admire them, trust them and want to be around them. My experience is that they tend to be articulate, friendly, smart, upbeat and, well, tall.

There was a celebrity, a rock star, on the E! television channel being interviewed the other day and the interviewer asked him what ordinary people did when they called him up.

"Mostly they just want to be around. They just want to spend time with me. Hang out."

Tall helps. I'm convinced of it. Kids: eat your spinach. Eat your carrots. As for me, at five foot seven, I may not be a celebrity yet, but I'm planning to be one of the exceptions that proves the rule. Me and Einstein. Remember him? •

Are You Ready For A Different Kind Of Football? Here It Comes

By Dan Rattiner

People think that men watch football for the pure athletics of it. And there's some truth to that. It's exciting to watch a spectacular diving catch by a wide receiver. Or a brilliant scramble out of the pocket by a deft quarterback.

But there are other aspects to the game. There is the grandeur of it. The strategy. The spectacle. And, also, there is the pure aggressiveness of it. Let's face it. Some people, notably women, tend to be passive and feminine. Some other people, notably men, tend to be aggressive and masculine. It's a trait among certain mammals that's been going on for a few billion years. And so, when the star quarterback gets hit as he releases the ball and his ankle snaps, it will be shown over and over again from different angles on television as the man is being carefully bundled onto a stretcher, and some announcer will say "it sure was unfortunate. Just one of those things. He still had the ball when he got hit.

Perfectly legal."

In the background, you will hear a hundred and twenty thousand people going ooh, and ah as they see it being replayed on the Jumbotron at the end of the stadium.

January. After that, I go into hibernation. Hockey and basketball are just a bunch of people running or skating up and back. In April, I rouse a bit for baseball. But what I am really looking forward to is the autumn, when once again football, some friends, a crackling fire, some beer and some pretzels come to my living room.

All of which leads me to what is about to happen next week, which, as you probably know, is the start of a new winter football season on television. It is known as the XFL, it will play once a week every Sunday beginning on February 3, and it will continue playing its games until April. The teams are from New York,

Memphis, Orlando, Chicago, Las Vegas, and San Francisco. And they have names such as Hitmen, Demons, Rage and Thunderbolts. The games will be presented by NBC, which has teamed up with WWF professional wrestling chief Vince McMahon, Clotheslining and other nasty tactics will be legal. It will be no holds barred football, played with fangs and it is coming to your living room.

And then they'll cut to a beer commercial.

For all the above reasons, as a normal male, I have loved watching professional football on television on Sundays. And I have followed it year after year, particularly as the season has headed toward its inevitable climax, the Superbowl, in who has thought this all up. More power to him. I think.

I really don't know what went on in Vince McMahon's mind when he thought of this, but I have an idea. McMahon's professional wrestling is pure entertainment, a fake performance in acrobatics by cartoon superheros representing good and evil. It appeals to male aggressiveness. It's funny. It gets it out of a man's system for awhile. And it's safe and acceptable.

McMahon I believe, saw professional football, which is real, as hypocritical. He saw the Tough Man Competition, which is also real but discredited, as a disgrace. And he saw all those semi-serious brawls they allow to happen in professional hockey. Somewhere in there, he thought, there was a better way to do football.

And so, McMahon has taken a cue from the sandlot football that all young men play as kids. That game is rough and tough, and if the level of play does not measure up, it's still fun. In McMahon's XFL there will indeed be referees but I gather they will be ineffectual. Hitting punt receivers waiting for the ball to come down will be legal. Clotheslining and other nasty tactics will be legal. It will be no holds barred football, played with fangs and it is coming to your living room next week.

The promotion for all of this has been going on for months and I am sure you are well aware of it. Players' annual salaries will only be $35,000 to $60,000 a year, one tenth of the salaries of those in the pros. The team that wins each game gets to distribute $5,000 to each player for the win. Celebrations in the endzones will be encouraged after touchdowns. The last game of the season will not be called anything pompous like Superbowl XLVI, but simply, according to McMahon, "that game they play at the end of the season."

There will be all sorts of superheros in the stands. Also some very scantily dressed cheerleaders — also in the stands. Microphones and videocameras will be allowed to go anywhere. And Minnesota Governor (and former WWF wrestler Jesse Ventura) will be an announcer. It should be quite a promotion. And God knows if it will change the way the regular NFL games are played this autumn.

I do hope nobody gets hurt — the players are being coached in rough tactics that inflict no damage — and nobody shoots out the cable TV tower in our community when it comes time to watch one of these games.

This is not said lightly. About twenty years ago, right as they broke for halftime during the Superbowl, all the TVs in East Hampton went black. Investigators drove out to the TV tower in Springs and found that somebody had been there and had blasted the base of the apparatus with a shotgun. You could still smell the gunpowder.

Probably a woman. One of those passive, feminine types.

The Calm Before The Storm?

While "Mad Cow" Sheep Tissue Is At Plum Island, Cattle Are Quarantined in Texas

By Jerry Cimisi

Cell tissues from sheep which the government believes may have been exposed to mad cow disease were shipped to Plum Island, off Long Island's North Fork, this past summer. Yet despite what at the time seemed grave concern by officials, to date the tissues have not been subjected to any testing or research on Plum Island.

This past summer U.S. Department of Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman announced a "state of emergency" in regards to the possibility that three flocks of Vermont sheep may have been exposed to feed contaminated with mad cow disease before being imported from Belgium. He ordered the government to buy the sheep from their owners, destroy the animals and have the tissue studied at the Plum Island Animal Disease Research Center.

Mad Cow disease, or Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy (BSE), is a neurological wasting disease of the brain. Once the disease is contracted, death is certain.

When recently questioned as to why the sheep tissue, which the government has seen to possibly contain the seeds of an "emergency," have not been used for any testing or research, Plum Island Assistant Director Carlos Sontoyo said, "The reason is that this is more of an APHIS issue than one for Plum Island." APHIS, a department of the USDA, is the Animal Plant Health Inspection Service.

"I think the tissue is going to wind up at the facility at Ames, Iowa," Mr. Sontoyo added. Ames is the location of the National Veterinary Services Laboratory (which was instrumental in early work on the West Nile Virus.) "The tissue was shipped here more or less as a holding area," added Mr. Sontoyo. Yet it seemed apparent last summer that USDA Secretary Glickman had Plum Island in mind as the final destination for the sheep tissue. If Ames had been the ultimate destination, why couldn't the tissue have been shipped there in the first place? And if, for whatever reason, the USDA decided the tissue should go on to Ames and not stay at Plum Island, why has the tissue remained there since the summer and not been shipped off to Ames? Especially since internal USDA memos plainly express concern over the economic fallout if other countries perceive even the remote possibility of the existence of mad cow disease in America.

Curiously, officials at Plum Island didn't seem to know the tissue was already at Ames. Jim Rogers, a spokesman for APHIS (Animal Plant Health Inspection Service) of the U.S. Department of Agriculture, verified in a recent phone interview that tissues from the Vermont sheep also went to the National Veterinary Service Laboratory in Ames for testing and that testing was indeed done on the tissues there.

Rogers added that the tests showed evidence of Transmissible Spongiform Encephalopathy or TSE, if not specifically BSE. When asked if the press could have access to any reports or documents related to the testing, Rogers said that they could only be accessed through a Freedom of Information Request.

The beginning of the 21st Century has seen widespread panic throughout Europe over the entrance of mad cow disease into the foodchain. A panic that, due to very recent articles in the American media, seems to have only just now gotten some American consumers worried about mad cow.

The day before Thanksgiving, Reuters reported that USDA Secretary Dan Glickman – who was attending a food bank event with President Clinton – said that American consumers did not need to share Europe's "hysteria" in regards to BSE because of our "effective regulatory system."

But on January 29, members of the National Cattlemen Beef Association met to discuss what has come to be considered the very real threat of mad cow disease occurring in America. With 100 million cattle in the U.S., cattle comprises the biggest segment of American agriculture.

Scientists believe the disease first got a foothold in the United Kingdom in the 1980s, when the carcasses of infected slaughtered animals were rendered into feed and then given to other animals destined to slaughter. British health officials believe that the outbreak can be traced to the unclean practices of Prosper de Mulder, a company that has a lock on 70 percent of Britain's meat rendering industry. The BSE from animals rendered into feed survived because their offal was not cooked at high enough temperatures. This diseased food was fed to cattle and began an epidemic in which close to 190,000 cattle in the U.K. were infected with BSE.

The Associated Press reported on January 27 that a quarantine of 1,221 cattle in Texas resulted from a recall of 22 tons of feed from Purina Mills, Inc.; the company said it had discovered that the feed had contained cow meat. A 1997 ban forbids the feeding of ruminants (herbivores) animal feed. (Beef byproducts can still be fed to swine and poultry). Yet although there is great concern about livestock feed, the FDA has recently discovered, in a random inspection of feed manufacturers, that about twenty percent were in violation of the new labelling system.

The U.S. government has put in place a contingency plan should there be an outbreak of mad cow in America. It would require the USDA to be assisted by scientists in England. Because of the mad cow outbreak there since the 1980s, there are more experienced researchers there. The USDA would withhold a public announcement about mad cow until verification of BSE would be made in the United Kingdom.

Plans have been drawn up as to how herds might be quarantined and or destroyed. A sort of war room would be set up at the APHIS center in Riverdale, Maryland.

This anxious anticipation in America is an ultimate outcome of what has been going on in Europe these past few months. The European Union is considering a ban on Canadian beef following a study of that country's food inspection procedures. The concerns range from the possibility of the presence of mad cow to the use of hormones in meat. One hormone, an endocrine disruptor, may injure the immune system of children.

Many school districts throughout France have taken beef off school lunch menus; and France has promised emergency aid to cattle ranchers. In mid-November France outlawed T-bone steaks, sweet-breads and banned animal feed from recycled cattle carcasses. An EU spokesman said beef consumption in France is down 40 percent in the past year.

France has had ninety cases of BSE in cattle this year, compared to thirty last year. In France, as in every country, when one animal in a herd is found with BSE, the entire herd is slaughtered.

German Farm Minister Karl-Heinz Funke called for a ban on all animal-based livestock feed, as well as the thorough testing of all the country's cattle.

The Guardian of England reports that the European Union, out of fear of BSE transmission, might enact a restriction on blood donors to the effect that any individual who has received blood cannot donate blood. Officials in England speculate this would cut the blood supply by about ten percent. The Guardian added that Belgium, Austria, some German states, Switzerland, Australia, Canada, New Zealand as well as the United States already prohibit blood donations from anyone who lived more than six months in the United Kingdom between 1980 and 1996. It was during that period that BSE incidence in livestock was at its highest, and transmission to humans was not only through meat but, the paper said, vaccines and cosmetics.

The Czech Republic has banned beef imports from France and Portugal.

At a meeting of European Union farm ministers a recommendation was put forth that all livestock feed be meatless, but the recommendation was not agreed upon by the majority. To dispose of present stocks of feed would mean a loss of nearly $1.3

billion U.S. dollars (1.5 billion Euro dollars) and replacement feed would cost about $600 million U.S. (700 Euro). Oil World, an economic newsletter based in France, said that if animal based feed needs to be replaced, this would require 2.15 million tons of soybean. Italy, which is the EU's biggest producer of soybeans, saw its soybean market rise appreciably this past month. Italy, along with France, has banned the use of meat and bone meal to herbivorous animals, but allows meat based feed to be given to poultry and pigs.

In Italy, the first suspected case of BSE was discovered at a slaughterhouse that supplies meat to the McDonald's in that country. The slaughterhouse is owned by the Cemonini company, which supplies about forty percent of the beef in Italy.

The USDA stresses that the quarantined Texas cattle have shown no evidence of BSE, nor does the feed from Purina. The measure is a precaution. Will the herd be destroyed, as in the case of the Vermont sheep – and reveal anything of worth? And if any tissues are studied, will the results be more accessible to the public? •

By Dan Rattiner

I met an elderly Jewish woman here in East Hampton the other day, who grew up in Paris and, during World War II, in the middle of the Nazi Occupation, filed and won a law suit for over $100,000. It's an almost forgotten story, although it was quite remarkable at the time and eighty-two year old Lounah Starr who is the mother of East Hampton builder and developer Regine Starr has the photographs and news articles to prove it. She has saved them for sixty years.

Lounah Starr stands 5'1" tall, has a full mane of white hair and speaks English with a heavy French accent that often lapses into full French. She talks with great forcefulness and humor; she was probably a tiger in 1940 when she was twenty years old. And there are the pictures of her with a full mane of black hair to prove it.

Lounah's family was a very wealthy Parisian family in the manufacturing business when the Germans came, overran Paris and occupied the country. Unlike many of the other countries that they occupied, they didn't rule it directly but many French officials collaborated with them and ran the country for them. They were called the Vichy French.

The Germans plundered most of Lounah's family's wealth; both her father and her brother were taken to a holding camp in Paris in anticipation of shipping them off to the concentration camps in Poland. At the time, Jews had no rights and all of them wore yellow stars stitched to their clothing. They could be arrested and shot if they went out without wearing this identification.

Lounah was determined to get her father and her brother out of the holding camp and she knew a French woman who was the mistress of a very powerful man, Monsieur Tattinger in the French Vichy Government. Lounah went to see this woman and asked her if she could help in freeing her brother and father. The French woman told her she would see what she could do, but it would cost her money. Lounah asked how much. The woman said, $100,000.

The following day Lounah arrived with the money and after that she waited a week and then went back to see the French woman. "I have nothing to report," the French woman said.

"Well, then I'll come back in a few more days," Lounah said. Three days later she was back and there still was no news. Then three days after that, there was still no news.

"I did my best," the French woman said.

"It wasn't good enough," Luna said. "Return my $100,000."

"Look," the French woman said, "you gave me the money, I did what I said I would. Here I have a letter from Monsieur Tattinger."

She showed Lounah the letter. It said that what the French woman was asking was something he would love to be able to do but it was beyond his ability. Lounah kept the letter and left.

"You have to understand," she told me, "I had

I had no fear of death, I do not fear it. I am a religious person, I am not afraid of anything.

no fear of death, I do not fear it. I am a religious person, I am not afraid of anything."

The following day she went to the French Court in Paris and asked to see the German Colonels who were running the place. They escorted her down into some back rooms. Several guards pointed guns at her and there were several Doberman Pinschers who growled at her as she came through. Finally, she found herself confronting the Chief of the German Contingent seated at a desk. He asked her what she wanted.

"I want to file a law suit against the French woman for taking my money," she said. The German looked at her Jewish Star, "Who do you think you are?" he said. "You have no rights in this country. I could have you arrested and taken away for bothering us with this."

"You won't do it," Lounah said. "Because if you were going to, you would have done it already." She held out her chin, "Let me show you this letter."

The German read the letter from Monsieur Tattinger, whom he knew quite well. Tattinger Champagne was a favorite of the Germans and was provided in great quantities from that vineyard by the owner, whose signature was on the bottom of the letter he was reading. After finishing the letter he told Lounah to wait where she was and then he went in the back for a while and spoke to some other Germans. When he returned, he told her that her petition to sue the French woman was accepted. She would be arrested, assigned a lawyer and be brought to trial.

"Frankly, I was amazed that all of this had happened so easily," Lounah said. "But the next day I found out why. It was headlines in all the papers. 'Monsieur Tattinger, accepting bribes to help Jews.' The Germans were going to teach the Vichy Government a lesson. No one was going to be making $100,000 if they weren't German. What I also realized was that as long as the trial was going on, my brother and my father were safe because the Germans were going to need them as witnesses."

The trial was a sensation and Lounah saw to it that it lasted a long time. In fact, it lasted so long that although the French woman was in jail, an appeal was still under way. When the Allies came and liberated Paris, Lounah, her brother and father and other surviving members of the family were free.

The French woman in prison thought that she too would be free once the Allies arrived. But, she was quite mistaken.

"The Americans didn't like what she had done either," Lounah said.

There would be a further trial. The French woman was not going to be coming out of jail anytime soon. Shortly thereafter she committed suicide in jail.

Regine Starr has built a home for her mother here in East Hampton. In addition to Regine, Lounah has a son living here on Long Island. She'll be close to both of them. She's also an excellent painter and has done hundreds of canvases and had many shows. Her work is largely portraits and religious scenes. And Lounah, who is full of life and shows little signs of aging, intends to continue her career for a long, long time. •

review: interact: stories of color

By Helga Morpugo

Imagine a foppish "Hamlet" on trial for court martial—Queen Gertrude an incestuous nympho in outrageous drag. Visualize a frumpy Ophelia dragging and flopping around on stage with a day-old beard.

Michael Disher and the Southampton Players have done it again. An ensemble of creative actors whooped it up, making Dan Haynia's one-act play "Hamlet On Trial" entertaining, original and fun. Director Michael Disher applied a campy twist to the Elizabethan tradition of using male actors in women's roles and wove his choreographic magic into the only large cast scene of the evening.

Matt Vilbas was a wonderfully smug Hamlet as he played the stage with the utmost of ease. Eric Fuerderer pulled out all the stops as Queen Gertrude while Jeff Schaeffer played Ophelia with equal abandon. Ken McGuire as Horatio and Shelly Pitkin as the Judge provided a markedly sober contrast.

Monologues written by John Gannon introduced the theme of each of ten one-act plays selected by the fifth annual "InterAct series, Eastern Long Island's only venue for new works.

Subtitled "Stories of Color" each of the short plays features colors such as black and white, black, gray and pink.

In the play, "The Pink Lady" the color pink was represented in the color of the drinks three senior beauties savored in a nightclub called "Dick" while they sized-up an eager, Latino waiter that received their tips in a sexually suggestive way while serving them in a bathing suit. The theme of the piece stated in the monologue was "I hope I'm never too old to have sex."

Diana Finegold as Goldie, Sonia Ustach as Mamie, and Priscilla Sprague as Sarah, created distinctive, delightfully eccentric characters that might have known each other since grammar school. As the flamboyant Latino waiter Matt Vilbas delivered a memorable performance that was both fluid and delightful. Director Paul Conroy's creative staging made the play one of the most entertaining pieces of the evening.

Not all of the themes were as lighthearted as the aforementioned, as evidenced by the final curtain piece entitled, "Not Dark Yet," a philosophical, soul-searching play written by twenty-year-old Brian Houghton about a man and his grandmother, both of whom have a terminal illness. Even while waiting for death, the grandmother finds ways to cheat at cards. Diana Finegold as Elizabeth (the grandmother) and Brian Lang as Jacob, played their roles with touchingly courageous objectivity.

One of the most note-worthy pieces of the evening was a masterfully orchestrated rendition of theatrical music entitled: "Choices," by Lisa McCluskey.

Director Paul Conroy coordinated actors and lighting to create a theatrical "Fugue" that was breath-taking both in content and execution. The title is the theme—the choices some of us make that may not meet with everyone's approval. Lighting and the placement of three cubes separate three characters who bridge each other's stories, revealing a little more each time one takes her turn.

Vay David gives a thoughtful, deeply affecting performance as the housewife who was never allowed to do anything that would fulfill her own needs. "I only wanted to do something for me. He told me to get the idea out of my head." Her reluctant acceptance of her isolation is both telling and painful when her children disown her after her divorce.

Allison-Rose De Temple follows is touchingly innocent as Rebecca, the child-like girl who decides to have her baby out of wedlock when she can no longer live in denial of her pregnancy. "My father told me I'd have to get married or get out."

Chelsea King gives a strong performance as Katie, who was date raped. "A slut? You call me a slut? I was raped, you asshole."

The lighting and musical interplay among the characters was punctuated with a powerful message delivered in chorus: "I'm standing on my own two feet now. Are you?"

"Model Behavior" by Paul Conroy was a humorous way of telling the sad story of what some people have to go through in their efforts to earn a living.

"The Last Grasp" by Joyce Pitkin touchingly showed family squabbles over the material possessions that are left behind by departed parents.

"Napoleon and Josephine at Breakfast" by Tana Lee Alves gives historic information while engaging Napoleon and Josephine in an ego-driven competition over their place in history. The play ends with a historically romanticized version of their enduring love.

"Dot.Com" by John Gannon takes place outside an Unemployment Office run by an enormously over-qualified employee who was never offered any other opportunity.

"You want to fly a kite with me?" asks mentally retarded Freddy, touchingly played by Chuck Novatka. The theme is beautifully stated in one of the lines: "He didn't care what the score was. He was there to enjoy the game."

"Battle of Hearts" by Valerie Chamberlain shows the ambivalence and miscommunication of insecure lovers who only want to be special to someone.

"The Trojan Stallion" by Scott Andrew Christensen is an engaging play about "something that nobody wants to confront."

When asked by what criteria the plays were selected, director Michael Disher replied: "Variety—and every play had to have something interesting that made me absolutely want to work with it."

Additional performances will be held on Friday and Saturday, February 2nd and 3rd, 2001 at 8 p.m. at the Avram Theatre, Southampton College. Call: (631) 287-8480 for reservations.

The Sheltered Islander By Sally Flynn

OBSERVATIONS OF AN ISLANDER # 140

My daughter turned 13 this year and as January came upon us, I knew it was time to have that dreaded mother-daughter talk ...

We got comfy on the couch with some hot chocolate and I began my well-rehearsed speech.

"When a man and a woman love each other, she will do things for him that seem horrific and disgusting at first. But maturity makes us understand that love has no limits and sacrifice is a woman's portion."

"You already told me about sex Mom."

"This is worse than sex, much worse."

"Worse than sex? What's worse than sex?"

"Football."

"Football? The game?"

"It's not a game. It's an obsession that takes over men's minds. It makes them think of other things besides making you happy."

"NO! That's awful!"

"Yes, daughter, it is. Anything that detracts from their duty to your happiness is to be avoided whenever possible. But football happens. Let me explain. Football is played by a bunch of millionaires and drug addicts in tight white lycra pants. They run from one end of the field to another trying to secure a ball."

"That doesn't sound too bad."

"They try to win by breaking and/or detaching the limbs of other players. The more pain they inflict, the more your man will idolize them. The more pain they endure, the more your man will admire them. They play this game with broken fingers, broken legs, and headless, many of them."

"Oh Mom..."

"Your man will dedicate himself to a team and for better or for worse he will stay true to that team for the remainder of his life. He will wear shirts like theirs proclaiming his devotion."

"Why? They don't wear shirts proclaiming their devotion to us..."

"My point exactly daughter. They are much more devoted to their team than you. They will forget your birthday, your anniversary, and even Valentine's Day, but they never, ever forget Playoff dates and the Stupor Bowl."

"Mom, that's terrible!"

"It's a fact of life, it's better you find out now than fifteen years from now when you get married. My mother never told me about this and it was a terrible shock. I wasn't emotionally prepared to come in second after the 49ers. Your father told me he liked watching the game because the men had my initials on their helmets and even on their field. It made sense at first. The team was in my favorite colors of gold and red and my initials were everywhere in that stadium. But slowly I came to realize, he was watching the game itself. It was a painful realization. I was alone in the kitchen getting him a cold brew when the epiphany came to me. As your mother I just want you to understand it all now."

"Mom, oh Mom...."

"There's more. Your man will have Stupor Bowl parties."

"Are they bad?"

"Your man invites his friends over. They drink beer, eat chips and dip all over the house. They eat pizza, chili dogs, tacos and bean dip and every gaseous edible known. They are loud, obnoxious and disgusting."

"I'll leave the house."

"Yes dear, that's when you visit me or a friend. You don't want to see him like that. Sometimes, men need to be alone. Stupor Bowl Sunday is one of those times. You just get the money from his wallet and go shopping or visit friends. You must steel yourself for the moment of truth that comes when you walk through that door after the party is over."

"Oh no...no....Mom....he has to clean up....you can't mean"

"Take a deep breath, calm down... yes.... you return home to a destroyed home."

"Well if he messed it up, he can clean it up."

"First of all, real men don't clean. And if they do, it's such a lousy job, you do it over anyway."

"But it's not fair, it's not right. This is horrible Mom..."

I held her and we wept together. I can only hope I have done the right thing by telling her about this when she is still so young and impressionable. •

"Wolffer Estate Greets the Chinese New Year"

On January 24, 4699, the Chinese Year of the snake was celebrated at the Sweet-N-Tart Restaurant in Chinatown. Roman Roth (Wolffer Estate Wine Maker) and Eileen Yin-Fei Lo (author of The Chinese Kitchen) matched American wine from the Hamptons with Chinese dishes. Roman and Eileen found that the variety of wines from the Hamptons performed extraordinarily well with the flavors & spices found in Chinese food. A favorite among the guests were drunken shrimp, marinated in Wolffer Estate Selection Chardonnay and then poached. What a great way to ring in the Chinese New Year.

CLASSIC CARS WITH BOB GELBER

50s SPORTS CARS

In the old days (to me the "old days" were the 50s), sports cars were new to America. If it looked like a sports car, drove like a sports car, and was as uncomfortable as a sports car – it was a sports car. But most of all, sports cars of that period were fun to drive, even if they were rather undependable. The British dominated the sports car scene in the 50s. Over the years, I owned a 1949 MGTC, a 1952 MGTD, 1950 Jaguar MK 5 Drophead, 1952 Jaguar XK 120M Coupe and a 1955 Jaguar XK 140MC Roadster. Both MGs had windshields that folded flat, and in the summer months, I always drove with them down. I loved the view over the chrome plated windshield wiper motor, and one felt like he was driving a four wheel motorcycle. Those XK Jags were just about the sexiest looking things on the highway, when they made it to the highway. You didn't just drive a XK Jaguar, you were married to it. There's a 50s joke that goes, "Why do the British drink warm beer? Because they all have Lucas refrigerators!" (Lucas Ltd. supplied all, notably unreliable, electrics for British cars.)

But these Jags were great sports cars. They would run circles around four-porthole Dynaflow equipped Buick Roadmasters. It was in the mid-50s that the fuzziness about sports cars began. Mercedes introduced the 300 SL Gullwing coupe, and an upstart new company with a name no one could pronounce properly, started to sell cars – Porsche. All of a sudden, sports cars didn't ride so rough, were relatively comfortable, and were extremely well made. These two cars were expensive, but you got what you paid for. The 1955 Mercedes Gullwing cost $7,500, while an MG cost about $2,200.

They were dependable and, finally, you weren't married to your car. With these cars, you were married to your mechanic! As good as these cars were, their mechanical specifications were very sophisticated. To a country whose mechanics had been nursed on flat-head Fords, a fuel injected Mercedes or a rear-engined air-cooled Porsche could have just as well have been dropped from a flying saucer.

You searched for the best mechanic, and treated these guys better than your family physician. You bought them bottles of liquor for Christmas, and laughed at their jokes. These cars needed three things to keep happy...tune ups, tune ups and tune ups.

There was another unknown sports car quietly making its introduction onto the American scene at this time. It had a wonderful name that seemed to roll off your lips as it was pronounced... Ferrari. These Italian cars were very rare, and the few that were around were spied mostly at race tracks, owned by really rich guys with expensive sounding names like Briggs or Count Wolfgang. If you think you needed a mechanic with an MIT degree to keep your Mercedes or Porsche running, a Ferrari was a nightmare. For this car, the ideal mechanic was a small Italian who spoke no English and had given up his brain surgeon practice in Rome!

The early cars were hard-core sports machines, and bore very little resemblance to the sedans and coupes of the world. But what has happened over the last forty years is that sports cars have become softer, more shall we say, "user friendly." This trend started with the 1955 Ford Thunderbird, which Ford advertising touted as a "personal sports car" (whatever that means). The Thunderbird was a two seat beauty, but it didn't handle much better than a 1955 Ford sedan... which was to say, terrible. The car was even offered with an automatic transmission, which instantly ruined its reputation as a serious driving machine. Chevrolet did the same thing with the 1955 Corvette, which offered a ridiculous two speed automatic gearbox. Yet these cars sold like hotcakes. Why?... Because they were extremely attractive and they were made in the good ol' USA!

During this period I also owned a slew of Alfa Romeos, including two Giulias and a 2000 and 2600 Spyder. These were all wonderfull machines with quite advanced specifications for their price. Truly "poor man's Ferraris," Alfas have always had this image and, frankly, there's nothing wrong with that.

In retrospect, all of the early sports cars were uniquely wonderful in their own ways. I'm certainly not alone in my thinking, because of all the post war collector cars, the sports cars of this era are the most coveted. I wish I had the foresight to keep every one that I owned. Nobody did!

TECHIE TOTS

Your toddler may be more computer literate than you. Rather than be intimidated by this statement, try embracing the Internet as a learning tool for your youngster. For toddlers, try playing on the net with your child on your lap. As your child grows older, slowly move them towards the stage of directing the mouse him/herself. Working together with your child on your computer will prove to be a rewarding activity. No matter your child's age or learning level, there are learning resources for everybody on the web.

www.ajkids.com - An excellent site to launch your young one's search for any subject. For children who love asking questions, the kid's version of "Ask Jeeves" is sure to unearth all the answers.

www.pbs.org/kids/ - With the help of all your favorite PBS characters, your child can test his/her skills in memory, counting, the alphabet, and coloring. Along with fun features such as karaoke, this PBS site boasts forty-seven learning games.

www.sesameworkshop.org - Whether you choose to swing by the site to print out a coloring page or decide to stop by with your youngster to drop his/her favorite Sesame Street pal a line, the workshop's website will not disappoint. Tune into "Sesame Street Radio" to hear some of the show's greatest hits.

www.iknowthat.com - An educational game site for children ages 2-12, this site encourages learning through creativity. Pre-k and kindergarten-aged children will enjoy learning the alphabet with the interactive word games found in the "reading" section.

www.primarygames.com - An easily-managed site for parents and their young children, primarygames.com contains educational games for elementary school kids. After reviewing shapes with Sammy the snake, try unscrambling the mix-up at the Alphabet zoo.

www.totcity.com - With a focus on pre-schoolers and toddlers, visit totcity.com for activity ideas, health advice, and a list of recent recalls. For the tots, the interactive games are visually appealing and a lot of fun to play. Don't miss the adorable "attention-getters."

www.coloringpage.org - What a blast! Make sure you let your child have a try at this fantastically fun coloring site. Try your hand at painting moving images, translating secret codes, and emailing your own works of art to friends and family.

www.funschool.com - Choose your child's grade and be directed to a ton of age-appropriate activities. Whether in pre-school or sixth grade, the games promise to be both captivating and challenging.

www.pandasplayhouse.com - A simple and effective site, Panda offers many quality learning resources for toddlers, preschoolers, and kids up to grade 3. Visit Panda's Song Book to listen to your child's favorite tunes and learn the lyrics too.

www.kindlepark.com - Upon entering Kindle Park, you and your child will be met with a landscape filled with delight. Click on whatever catches your attention, be it the kite or the footprints, to be whisked away to a new adventure.

www.paulysplayhouse.com - For simply entertainment, come visit Pauly's Playhouse. Offering an array of games along, a silly sound room, and an intriguing art gallery, the playhouse promises to impress you with its excellent graphics and animation.

Shop 'til You Drop...With Maria Tennariello

My family came out east for the weekend and I get withdrawals when I can't shop, so the next best thing is to take them with me. My daughter-in-laws thought it was the best idea yet, especially on Super Bowl Sunday. We really didn't want to sit around and watch the game: Krista, Chelsea, Marisa and Alysa tagged along. So come along with us...

We drove to Hampton Bays, where Val's Closet is having a 30% off sale going on. We had a great time picking and choosing the entire collection of consignment designer clothing here. If you haven't been there yet, now is the time...

Right across the street at Fandango's there is a sale on ladies selected merchandise. This is a funky shop for eclectic purchases. Great clothing, gift ideas, jewelry, accessories and much more. The girls loved it and will certainly be back the next time they come out for a visit.

On Jobs Lane in Southampton at Norahs wouldn't you know it, we happen to catch the 50% off sale on all their beautiful clothing? Nora's is relocating and will remain in Southampton. Beside the 50% off, some items are priced below cost. Go in and take advantage of the great savings, especially in the outlet department, everything is $25 or less. Call Norah at 287-4636 for information and schedule. Stay tuned, I will let you know her new location as soon as I find out.

The trip back toward Southampton was great; we all sang in the car and had so much fun. "Stop! There's Hildreth's Department Store" Maria and Janie said. Uh, oh, I knew the boys were in trouble now. Wouldn't you know it there is a "Whine" sale going on with up to 50% off on selected in-stock merchandise. How could you walk out of the store empty handed? We didn't! Hildreth's Department Stores are located on Main Street, Southampton, Clearance Center on West Main Street and the House and Garden Store is on Montauk Highway in Bridgehampton.

In Bridgehampton on Main Street, C & W Mercantile is having a "Winter Sale" with fine European and American home furnishings, table top and bed linens and gifts. The sale includes Palais Royal bed linens, tabletop linens, accessories and children's clothing. Don't miss this one!

Off to Sag Harbor to the Havens House on Madison Street where they are having a huge annual winter clearance sale on their most unique and selective vintage clothing. Items are marked as low as 40% and 50% off. Havens House also has a large selection of "as is" silk lingerie for only $5. Everyone is invited to see their spring preview that includes such collectable vintage labels as Pucci, Hermes, Yves Saint Laurent and Bonnie Cashin. There is also an extensive collection of smashing beaded bags, shoes, silk scarves, hats and jewelry. If you would like to become the quintessential modern fashionista with an edge from the past, don't pass this shop up. Call for hours or appointments at 631-725-4634.

We were all getting tired and hungry, so we all decided that the shopping day had to come to an end. I am already looking forward to their next trip back to Sag Harbor; we can do this again!

Until next week. Ciao and Happy Shopping!

Q. My husband and I are looking for a good old fashioned dance studio, something like Arthur Murray had many years ago. Is there anything available in the Eastern Long Island area? - J.R.

A. I have news for you, the Arthur Murray Studio is still in style and is still operating. What a great Valentine's gift for your favorite person or persons in your life. Give the gift that lasts a life time, dance, hold someone special, move together to the music. The Arthur Murray Studios, located at 4747-19 Route 347, Port Jefferson Station and 425 Old Country Road 39A, Southampton, are ready, willing and able to help you in every way. Call 631-331-5423 or 631-1486. - M.T.

ART COMMENTARY

With Marion Wolberg Weiss

THE ART SCENE: FAR FROM THE HAMPTONS ART IN SOUTHEAST ENGLAND

While art in London is innovative and interactive (especially installations), it's not the only game in town. Southeast England, with its seaside resorts and bucolic villages, may offer less "in- your- face" fare, yet there's no denying the art attractions.

Consider Brighton, variously called London-by-the-Sea, one of Britain's funkiest towns and a Bohemian refuge. It's long been a mecca for craftspeople, artists, actors and writers—not to mention its popularity with King George III who built a famous Indian-style palace, the Royal Pavilion, to serve as his personal hideaway.

Brighton provides other sanctuaries as well: it is home to the annual Brighton Festival, an extraordinary international celebration of the arts, as well as to the Fiveways Artist's Group, a local organization that offers open houses during the Festival. Founding member, Ned Hoskins, is a twenty-year resident, established painter and former art professor whose studio is always available for viewing throughout the year.

As an abstract artist, Mr. Hoskins is continually developing new ideas and techniques: a recent fall visit revealed a new series for The Automation Partnership, a company which designs/manufactures robots. Mr.

Hoskins' acrylics are effective examples of Postmodern hybrids, using a style that combines hard-edge geometric patterns with lyrical passages, thus recalling the artist's former landscape abstractions.

While Mr. Hoskins' studio furnishes a home setting for his art, another intriguing venue provides a similar opportunity. The Cavalaire House, a bed-and-breakfast built in 1888 for retired clergy, prides itself for original art works, most commemorating a Brighton of bygone years. Owners David and Gordon also present a Postmodern mood as well with their contemporary, colorful and geometrically-designed bedroom decor.

Brighton is not all Postmodern, of course. There's still the stunning, traditional Victorian architecture: particularly the well-known Brighton Pier (an unforgettable sight at night), the newly restored railway station, and the underground 1872 aquarium, a dark, dank, yet mesmerizing maze of fish tanks and tunnels.

Near Brighton are two other fascinating places that also address artistic diversity. One is Eastbourne, a seaside resort which attracts retirees like Florida does. Towner Art Gallery in the Old Town section, however, is nothing but contemporary. A recent impressive show featured Yinka Shonibare, who also had textile pieces at London's Tate Museum. His "Victorian Dandy" paintings at the Towner were very different, however, a political statement confronting racial prejudice in Victorian times.

Lewes, a perfectly charming, old-fashioned village with a castle in the middle of town, has a myriad of galleries as well to complete its picture. One is especially rewarding, the Star Brewery, a configuration of workshops/studios housing various modern and traditional crafts: a metalwork designer, bookbinders, bootmakers, and even a wigmaker.

The old and new come face-to-face in England.

Co-owner David of the Cavalaire House

HONORING THE ARTIST: JOSEPH MICHETTI

It's hard to imagine that a man would wait several decades before pursuing his love of painting, but that's exactly what painter and East Meadow resident, Joseph Michetti, did. "I retired ten years ago from the telephone company where I was a supervisor," Mr. Michetti explains, "and I immediately started painting. I haven't stopped since."

(Considering that Mr. Michetti paints five or six hours a day and takes up to three to four months to complete a work, we'd say he is pretty committed to his art.)

We can't help but wonder what kept Mr. Michetti from pursuing art, even part-time, for so many years. "I was busy raising a family (he has three daughters) and working as a supervisor," he answers quickly and without regret. (We can tell that he's especially proud of his daughters and grandchildren.)

"I did do some alabaster sculpture when I was working," Mr. Michetti finally admits, "and some stained glass projects, like Tiffany-style lamps."

Mr. Michetti's love of material, particularly shiny, clear material (like glass, for example) recalls this week's cover, a red candy apple that was originally wrapped in cellophane. "I'm attracted to shiny objects, like cellophane, materials you can see through," Mr. Michetti verifies. "I also like to paint detail; that's why it takes me so long to paint an object although the apple took less time than usual. People call my work Photorealism, but I prefer the term, 'contemporary realism.'"

No matter what term is used to describe Mr. Michetti's apple, however, it still looks good enough to eat, which is the general idea, of course. It's apparent that the artist feels a special affinity for the object. "Yes, I admit, I use a lot of red (and yellow)," Mr. Michetti notes. "But I don't wear red or yellow clothes. I'm rather conservative with what I wear. I guess I express myself through my art instead."

Mr. Michetti's artistic expressions have taken diverse forms, yet they mostly capture objects which are shiny; the works also evoke a sense of the past (like the candy apple). Consider his paintings featuring a bag of marbles spilled out over a Superman or Dick Tracy comic book.

For a man who developed an early interest in art ("I was always painting when I was young, doing scenery in junior high school," he recalls), the only professional training Mr. Michetti had was at Manhattan's School of Industrial Arts. Yet there's something in Mr. Michetti's background that may help clear up the mystery surrounding his commitment to art.

"There's a famous Italian painter, Francesco Paolo Michetti, who lived from 1851 to 1929," Mr. Michetti explains. "He's a relative, I'm told, and I've seen some of his work. One shows a woman walking through the vineyards."

Whatever Mr. Michetti's artistic lineage, one thing remains certain: the rewards he gets from painting. "When I'm gone, hopefully my work will still be around," he says. "They give one immortality." —Marion Wolberg Weiss

CAN'T WE TAKE THE TIME?

Two hugely different machismo pushed and shoved movies are grappling forcibly on the big screen. Firstly, Snatch is an impressive rapid-fire, point-blank-violent farce of the London underworld that seems to have graduated Italian Mafia business schools, but...

MAMMA MIA! OH, MADONNA MIA!! can we talk about what's behind the double-entendre title and, therefore, the movie made by Madonna's new husband (her Rocco's PaPa), Guy Ritchie? Dare I risk bringing about the Town Sheriff's siren-sounding arrival at Dan's Papers' front door to close down the homey little place lock, stock and cracker barrel? Well, let's blame it on the woman . . . everyone does! It is only a coincidence that my other review is also about a movie made by a Madonna husband, Sean Penn. The Pledge is also an almost one-word title. Of course, it had to be The Pledge because otherwise it is a furniture wax. Naturally, Mr. Ritchie could not use THE in his title . . . it would have lost the double meaning. A few of the silk-suited studio V.P.'s tried to get Ritchie to change his title but, they folded as limply as their silk breast pocket handkerchiefs. What gives Ritchie the strong, clip-to-the-jaw clout? His first feature, Lock, Stock and Two Smoking Barrels, did well in Britain but, its' shot- gun, scattered, brilliant style missed here because of class and language barriers that didn't help its storytelling's buckshot, frisky effusiveness. So, maybe we're talking about Publicity Power. And, let's face it . . . we're talking about the title. For any retiring Daughters-of-the-American Revolution, it refers to once-private female anatomy. I say, once, because a trailer is currently being shown which uses yet another similar vulgarity and can't be suppressed. Should we attribute it to the current Broadway Show The (You-Know-What) Monologues, written, produced and starring women? I think, it is just because it's there.

Snatch • The Pledge

ONLY THE NAMES HAVE BEEN CHANGED

Hollywood's stock in trade (and there have been barrels of them) has been exposing to the public, things not necessarily seen or heard around the house every day . . . like P.T. Barnum's successful "freakshows."

However, the fancies pass with time. Remember the profusion of Porn theatres? This is not to say that Mr. Ritchie's Snatch is totally immemorable. It is extremely witty in every way except for the title, which hasn't a really pointed Dorothy Parker-like pertinence as when she used the same term. The film is thoroughly as clever as a Japanese cleaver. It makes mincemeat of all films of this ilk.

BUT SERIOUSLY FOLKS

On the other hand (maybe the one chopped off in Snatch the director, Sean Penn's, The Pledge, is as repressed as Ritchie's film is exuberant. Jack Nicholson's homicide detective is fighting the pot-bellied, retirement frenzy of haunted unpleasantness. Revitalized by the rape-slaying of a little girl, he scrutinizes a barren landscape of psychological obsessions. Nicholson performs as well as Mr. Penn himself could in this reunion of Penn's Crossing Guard . . . the pair seem as one and they work better in this film. Penn's severely serious direction, headily arty, needs Nicholson's tough guy, stubby persona. Maleness bulges . . . almost bursts out of this mysterious and sensitive, rather European film, even as it essentially deflowers the heroic, mythic Hollywood, pumped-up with hot air, action/thriller, man and boy stars.

Hollywood can open more intelligent windows and look out at people as entities with proper names, unsteady legs, but, human, upright vision.

MAYOR KOCH Goes To THE MOVIES

Panic (+)

Panic is an exceptional and perfectly cast, film. This film is more like an extended short story rather than a fully developed script. It resembles the best English, French and Italian films which often put high powered, expensive Hollywood movies to shame.

The story revolves around Alex (William H. Macy), who is married to Martha (Tracey Ullman). They have a son, Sammy (David Dorfman) and lead what appears to be a simple, at times, boring life.

Alex and his father Michael (Donald Sutherland), however, are partners in the business of contract killing. Michael takes the contracts and Alex does the killing.

He wants to stop murdering people for a living and is going through a mid life crisis, so Alex decides to go see a shrink, Josh Parks (John Ritter). The shrink tells Alex that information about all the murders that he committed before their first meeting are protected under the patient-psychiatrist privilege. But any plans to kill in the future would be reportable to law enforcement officials. Josh subsequently learns about plans for Alex to commit another murder and he reports it.

Alex meets another patient in the doctor's waiting room. Her name is Sarah (Neve Campbell) and she is not sure whether or not she is bisexual.

Panic contains some violence, but very little blood and gore. Yet is it as powerful as the most violent motion picture that you have probably ever seen. It proves the maxim that less is more. See it before it disappears.

silvia lehrer's cooking column

I recently bought some skate, a flat-bodied fish. Until some years ago, skate was little known and perhaps today it's still not a popular fish. But it has become more available in good fish markets. The fish, flat and scaleless, is shaped like a diamond with a blade of cartilage that should be removed before cooking. Only the meaty "wings," which contain firm white meat, are marketed. It is truly a delicious fish with a delicate flavor.

When I brought it home from the fish market, I found I couldn't cook the fish that same evening. It held in the refrigerator for yet another day, or 36 hours later, and it was as fresh and sweet smelling as the day I purchased it. The fish holds up well providing it is very fresh when you purchase it.

I sautéed the skate in olive oil, added shallots and mushrooms, then deglazed the pan juices with white wine and a bit of butter. It is indeed a very tasty preparation.

About one cup of the cooked skate was leftover. The next day I chopped up a shallot, (or scallion if available) added it to cut pieces of skate along with lemon juice, salt and pepper to taste and enough mayonnaise to bind. We spread it on toasted slices of crusty Italian bread and it made a great lunch.

Winter is ideal for preparing skate. At this time of year, I also enjoy preparing cod. A fresh cod is a lean fish with firm white flesh that readily flakes when cooked.

One of my favorite ways with cod is to cook it Catalan style. This regional dish from Spain is baked on a bed of thinly sliced potatoes and seasoned with aromatic herbs, garlic and julienne of red pepper. Nicoise olives add a final touch of flavor and color.

BRAISED SKATE WITH MUSHROOMS

Have your fishmonger filet the skate into two filets by removing the blade sandwiched in the wing.

Serves 2

2 boneless, skinless skate wings, about 1 pound
2-3 shallots, finely chopped
1/3 pound shitake mushrooms, rinsed, dried and sliced thin
2-3 teaspoons fresh thyme leaves

2/3 cup dry white wine
Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper
1 tablespoon fresh lemon juice
1-2 tablespoons butter
Fresh thyme sprigs for garnish, optional

1. Rinse skate wing filets, and with a paring knife, cut slits into membrane side to prevent from curling while cooking. Pat dry with paper towels.

2. Heat oil in a non-stick skillet large enough to hold the skate in one layer. Add the shallots and, with a wooden spatula, sauté quickly over low heat until translucent being careful not to brown. Transfer the fish to a side dish. Add mushrooms to the skillet the fish cooked in, increase heat to medium-high and sauté, stirring constantly for 3-4 minutes, add thyme and stir to mix. Add the wine and bring to the edge of a boil, scraping the bottom to deglaze pan juices.

3. Return the skate to the pan in one layer, spoon over the mushrooms and some of the liquid then season the ingredients with salt and pepper and lemon juice. Cover the skillet and simmer for 6-8 minutes.

4. Meanwhile, warm two dinner plates. When the fish is done, transfer to the warm plates. Stir the butter into the liquid over moderately high heat. When it has thickened slightly, pour the resulting sauce over the fish and serve at once. Serve with steamed broccoli, if desired.

CATALAN COD WITH POTATOES AND ROASTED GARLIC

Cod is so popular in the Northeast, it is almost synonymous with the word fish. This Catalan dish from Spain is a simple but sophisticated one-dish meal. It can also be prepared with sea bass or red snapper filets.

Serves 4

8-10 cloves garlic, peel and leave whole
Extra-virgin olive oil
1 pound Russet potatoes, peeled and thinly sliced

Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper
1 1/2-2 pounds cod filet
1 red pepper, trimmed and cut into julienne strips
12-14 black Nicoise olives, pitted
1 bay leaf
Several sprigs of fresh thyme leaves

Preheat oven to 375 degrees.

1. Place garlic cloves in a small ceramic dish and pour in just enough olive oil to cover. Cover the dish with foil and roast for 35-40 minutes or until tender. Remove from oven and when cool slip the garlic from their skins. Set aside.

2. Meanwhile, in a saucepan of boiling, salted water, blanch potatoes for 5 minutes. Drain and pat dry. Coat bottom of ovenproof serving dish or casserole with 1 tablespoon olive oil. Layer potato slices to cover the bottom completely. Drizzle about 1 tablespoon olive oil over each layer of potatoes, sprinkle lightly with salt and pepper and arrange filets on top. Drizzle additional olive oil over the fish and season with salt and pepper to taste.

3. Add remaining ingredients, distributing the garlic, red pepper, bay leaf and olives evenly around and over the fish. Drizzle over a bit more oil, sprinkle with salt and pepper, and top with fresh thyme. Bake for about 18-20 minutes until fish is firm to the touch and opaque. Be sure to discard bay leaf before serving and serve at once.

To Prepare Ahead: Follow steps 1 and 2 up to several hours ahead. Refrigerate covered until ready to bake. Bring to room temperature and complete step 3 before serving.

Side Dish By Aji Jones

opened a new café next door to their market in the Water Mill shopping plaza. Open daily from 7 a.m. until 4 p.m., the café serves coffee, tea, sandwiches, pastries and other specialties. All items are also available for take out.

DINING FOR LOVERS According to Gourmet magazine, approximately ten couples get engaged weekly at the NYC restaurant, One if by Land, Two if by Sea, and that number increases to thirty during Valentine's week! On the East End we have plenty of romantic dining spots of our own. Here's a preview of what some local eateries have planned to help couples celebrate Valentine's week — more specials will be listed in next week's column:

VALENTINE'S DAY AT TIERRA MAR Tierra Mar (288-2700) will celebrate Valentine's Day on Wednesday, February 14th with a four-course aphrodisiac menu served from 6 to 10 p.m. The full dinner is $68 per person. The menu includes such choices as wild East Coast oysters; roast eggplant pouf with basil goat cheese flan; pan seared lobster and oyster mushrooms; Tierra

Mar beef Wellington; cedar plank roasted Maine salmon and Warm Chocolate Hazelnut Torte Soufflé.

TSUNAMI'S VALENTINE PRIX FIXE Tsunami Restaurant (329-6000) is accepting reservations for a special Valentine Prix Fixe on Friday, February 9th and Saturday, February 10th. The three-course special (which includes a bottle of Chandon champagne) will be available all evening at a cost of $85 per couple (plus tax and gratuity). The menu is as follows: Appetizers (choice of one) Soulful Miso, Crispy Shrimp or Tsunami House Salad. Entrees (choice of one) Sesame Spiced Salmon with Papaya Slaw and Wasabi Mashed Potatoes, Hoisin Rubbed Steak with Sautéed Spinach and Tsunami Sweet Potatoes, and Tsunami Fusion Rice. For dessert, couples can indulge in "Chocolate Five Ways" and coffee or tea.

FOOD FACTOID Have you ever wondered why they're called "hamburgers"? According to the "New Food Lover's Companion" (Barron's), the name hamburger refers to the German seaport town of Hamburg. Nineteenth-century German sailors sailed between Hamburg and the Baltic provinces of Russia and one of the things they brought back was raw shredded beef. A German chef then decided to cook the beef. One of the hamburger's earliest appearances as a sandwich was at the 1904 St. Louis Louisiana Purchase Exposition.

It's Our Garden WITH ELIZABETH AND CROW MILLER

In winter, most gardeners are only thinking about what they will grow next year. Coffee is one of many tropical plants that can be grown indoors to great effect in December, January and February.

With just slightly more coddling than you'd give most ordinary house plants, you can grow your very own coffee in your home. Because it is native to the tropics, where summertime is year-round, coffee will bloom or fruit in the dead of winter if you give it the right encouragement.

The key is to duplicate its natural conditions as much as possible. In most cases, that means plenty of light and warmth. But be careful about moisture; the biggest fallacy about tropical plants is that they need a wet soil. In the tropics the soil is very porous, and the plants are sustained mostly by humidity. You actually need to provide a well-drained soil, so that the plants don't become waterlogged. That means topsoil from your garden just won't do. Instead, use a good porous potting soil, such as one of the mixes sold at garden centers, and amend the mix with 1/3-compost and coarse sand before planting.

In its native Ethiopia, coffee grows as an evergreen tree, up to forty feet high. Indoors, however, you won't have to worry about it growing much taller than six to eight feet. It makes a great houseplant; its glossy foliage, flowers and fruit are all extremely attractive. The tiny, white, fragrant flowers are followed by green berries, known as cherries. The cherries ripen so gradually that a single branch usually has both immature green and ripe red fruits on it. Inside the berries are the green beans that are roasted, ground then brewed to make coffee.

If you keep your thermostat between 60-70°F through winter, your plants should thrive, although slightly higher daytime temperatures are better. Pot your coffee in a standard organic soil blend, but mix in about 1/4-peat moss since the plant likes a slightly acid pH. Coffees are fairly heavy feeders. While the plant is actively growing, feed with fish/seaweed solution every twenty weeks, and use a balanced organic fertilizer (3-4-3).

Once your plant does flower, you'll need to encourage pollination by tickling the blossoms with a feather or small paintbrush. Check your plant often while it is blooming; coffee flowers are open and ready for pollination only for a very short time. When the cherries turn dark red, this is signifying that they are ripe. Pick the cherries and remove their seeds, there are two in each fruit. Soak the seeds in water overnight to remove the slippery covering, then rinse them. Let the seeds dry for one week, then squeeze the seeds with your fingers to remove the beans that are inside.

When you're ready to try roasting the beans, we recommend the range-top method, which is similar to the way you pop corn. Roast a single layer of the beans in a shallow pan, with a lid, over medium heat. Use no oil; just shake the pan constantly to avoid scorching. Note: The beans will darken and pop, listen carefully. When you hear the first pop, you have a light to medium roast, the second pop is a dark, espresso roast. Then grind and brew.

HEALTH & BEAUTY

About Face... "Oldies But Goodies"

A few months ago, I had been skimming through a copy of Good Housekeeping and came across an article on a few celebrities. They did a little story on them and then asked a few 'personal' favorites of theirs. One of these ladies was Renee Russo. As I was reading up on her likes and dislikes, one thing she mentioned she couldn't live without was something called 'Frownies' as her number one beauty secret. I have been in the business for a quite awhile now and was searching my brain for what this could possibly be! I was certain I knew them all. I emailed Good Housekeeping and asked them what it was she was referring to. After some time they got back to me saying that it was a product that is put on the face for wrinkles and frowns. Hmmmm, I thought... something new! They gave me the company's name, address and email. I promptly wrote them and asked them what this was all about. Bear in mind, I thought this was a new company and product. I began corresponding with them. They called it the "Secret to Saving Face" and what it is are these little odd shapes that you put on your face at night and it makes wrinkles and frowns disappear. I couldn't wait to try this one out. A very helpful man, Mr. Wright, explained to me that they have been around since 1889! He went on to tell me they are used by Hollywood actresses for as long as that. He named one movie where

Gloria Swanson appears in them on Sunset Boulevard. I saw this movie not too long ago and I did remember her answering her bedroom door to a gentleman with all these odd things pasted on her face! It looked like a home face-lift attempt. But I never gave it a second thought. I remember thinking that this movie is an old one and this is what they must have done back then. Little did I know at that point Ms. Swanson used them off screen as well. I asked Mr. Wright to send me the products. A few days later they arrived, in these real pale early 1900's pink colored boxes. I opened them and found a bunch of these little triangles and other odd shapes. I could not wait to get going. Later that evening, I washed my face as per instructions...massaged the area that was the trouble spot, in my case, between my brows. The area cannot have any creams or oils or else the little shapes won't adhere. After massaging the area I put water on a triangle and pressed it to my brow. A short time later it dried and was very stiff. I tried to frown and it refused to let me. I slept with it on that night. In the morning I used a cool damp wash cloth to remove it and I was amazed at the result. The area was truly relaxed! The little line was also filled in. Not stressed looking at all. I knew that this was going to have to be used for a couple of weeks for it to take effect but to see a little magic right away was encouraging. I began to try the other shapes on different areas with the same success. It takes a little bit of getting used to in the beginning, sleeping with a stiff piece of paper on your face, but it is worth it. They say over time these stress areas will disappear. They can be worn during the day as well. I chose the evening, well, for obvious reasons. The company, the B&P Company in Ohio, has a website that is very interesting to visit. It lists some of its famous users and has a wonderful history of the company. Wrinkles and Frownies can be mail ordered. Somehow I think I remember seeing them in Woolworth's a long time ago, or maybe on my grandmother's dressing table. Contact them through their website at www.frownies.com or B&P Company, Inc. P.O. Box 41184 Dayton, Ohio 45441. The company said that they were sold at several places in the tri-state area, but I had no luck. I was in a cosmetic store last week and came across another product that was similar to this. I guess you just can't beat the oldies but goodies. Email me with any new/old finds that you come across that you think would be of interest to this column. Later. - Annette Gunnels

POLICE BLOTTER

As Tolstoy said, all happy families are alike, all unhappy families are unhappy in their own way – or something to that effect. At any rate, in Riverhead there was one unhappy family as a mother and son were arrested for beating up on dad. Police allege that when the 18 year-old son of a 38 year-old woman happened upon mom and dad fighting, the son, along with two friends, assailed dad with a baseball bat, while the missus also struck her husband. Mom and son left, and were arrested later the same day, while dad nursed his battered self at Central Suffolk Hospital.

A two car accident – without drivers. This oddity happened in the King Kullen parking lot in Cutchogue. Apparently an '86 Chevy SUV slipped out of gear, rolled and hit a '98 Mercury sedan. Damage, fortunately, was slight.

A hit man once said, if you want to get away with breaking the law, make sure your taillights are working. In the same vein, when an East Hampton Town Police officer pulled over a driver who was passing another car unsafely and, at a high rate of speed, the officer discovered that the driver had had his license suspended five times. He was also in possession of marijuana – a total of thirty-three small bags of grass, as well as three marijuana pipes. Perhaps the defendant will drive more carefully in the future.

Some people complain about a neighbor's dog going on their property. Well, a Montauk resident complained to police about a neighbor's horses that often leave their own yard for his. The complainant is taking the owner of the wandering horses to civil court, he told authorities.

When a gentleman asked a number of unruly youths to leave his establishment, the Dutch Motel in East Hampton, one of the youths removed the "H" from the trunk hood of the man's '99 Honda, causing the car to be thereafter pronounced with a Cockney accent.

How rotten can you be? An unknown person hurled a brick right through the front door of Ralph Rotten's Fudge and Gourmet Shoppe in Riverhead.

The crime wave continues. A group of teenagers playing basketball at the Montauk Public School allegedly broke a window with their basketball. As the police report reads, a detective will "continue investigation."

Early last summer, a woman from Indiana drove over the toes of an East Hampton Police officer after she had been pulled over. She was recently fined $565 for assault in the second degree, failing to comply with a police officer's directions and aggravated unlicensed use of a motor vehicle.

Now, this is a crime wave: Police say that the same man whom they believed to have robbed the Bridgehampton National Bank on January 11, struck again, this time at the Suffolk County National Bank in Southampton, on January 23, allegedly leaving with $3,000. Terry A. Jones, who had lived in East Hampton since 1995, is on parole from a drug and robbery conviction in New York. Mr. Jones, not surprisingly, is no longer at home in East Hampton. Nor is he to be found outside the bank. Like his first heist, Mr. Jones allegedly presented a teller with a note saying that he had a gun – though at no time was a gun seen – got his money and left on foot. Police dogs and helicopters were unable to locate him.

Southampton Village has just enacted a leash law. All dogs in the village must be leased in public; in addition, owners must scoop up after their dogs or face a $250 fine or 15 days behind bars. This conjures up the scene of some tough in the Riverhead jail asking a nervous member of the nouveau riche: "You're in for what?"

BOCES And The Celebration Of Technology In Education

Last month the Eastern Suffolk BOCES Model School Program presented the first annual Celebration of Technology at Stony Brook University's Center for Excellence and Innovation in Education. The event shared the successful approaches used in daily classroom practices to encourage teachers and students to integrate technology into the curriculum.

Some of the projects that were displayed included "First Grade Science," in which first graders used their five senses to explore different experiences that were then developed into a Power Point Presentation and "Digital Media" in which high school students used the latest technology to create interactive video pieces.

Dr. Willard Daggert, President of the International Center for Leadership in Education was a keynote speaker. Opening remarks were given by Michael Griffin, Ed.D, Executive Director of Instructional Support, Planning and Technology at East Suffolk

BOCES, Thomas Liao, Ph.D., Chairman of the Department of Technology at Stony Brook, and Kathleen Wojciechowski, Model Schools Program Administrator.

The Model Schools Process for Instructional Technology Integration includes the development needs ning, training and curriculum development are constructed to complement local improvement needs and to address deficiencies in reading, math and other areas. Peer demonstrations of integrated use of technology reflect emerging teaching and learning practices to improve student achievement.

Corporate partners of the BOCES program at Stony Brook include Compaq, PASCO Scientific, L.L. Weans the Education Stores, Lexmark, Contemporary Computer Services Incorporated, Cablevision and Networked Educational Technologies.

Among the goals and objectives of the Model Schools Program is to train and support teachers in technologies that promote effective instruction and the integration of technology and telecommunications across all content areas K-12; to identify and explore new technologies which facilitate the delivery of instruction; to assess the needs and provide staff development strategies and programs which most effectively train teachers to integrate technology into curriculum that aligns with school improvement plans.

John Yager (Teacher at East Hampton High School), Roberta Keis (Quogue Computer Coordinator), Dr. Michael Griffin (Director of Technology Eastern Suffolk BOCES) and students from Quogue.

Kathleen Wojciechowski (Westhampton Beach Eastern Suffolk BOCES Director), Roberta Keis, Mr. Albert Prodell (VIP), Mr. Gary Bixhorn (VIP), Joe Zahra (Sag Harbor Tech. Director), Suzanne Bond (Sag Harbor parent) and students from Quogue.

and complementary components of educational technology planning, customized professional development and the implementation of the New York State Learning Standards and Assessment through technology applications and telecommunications. Plan-
